² Marking on the front hull : "Chassis 22274". This tank most probably comes from the Bourges fire range.

³ The data plate shows the following information : "Constructeur (Factory) SFAC; Matériel (Material) AMX-13 T; N° (SN) 1324; Date 1.7.55 (built on 1st July 1955)".

⁴ Being restored to complete running condition. The data plate shows the following information : "Issy les Moulineaux; Type 13 D 5; Série 2C N° 13; Date 14.3.58". A plate indicates that the tank was repaired at the ERGMEB Gien on 27 September 1971.

⁵ The RN stamped on the front bumper is 402690.

⁶ The RN stamped on the front bumper is 4015742, the chassis serial is 244712.

⁸ Being restored to complete running condition. The data plate shows the following information : "Hotchkiss-Brandt; Typ. Cargo; Nr 0129; Gebaut am 22.10.50 (built on 22 October 1950)".

⁹ Sequence number 1-620, tank built by Pressed Steel Car.

¹⁰ The Bland B1 bis were previously on display at the Fort de Seclin, near Lille. They both come from the Bourges fire range. They will be both totally restored.

¹¹ This tank will also be fully restored.

¹² This wreck was identified as being the B1 bis N° 243 "INTREPIDE", which was part of the 8th Combat Tank Battalion in 1940 and was destroyed at Moreuil on 1st June 1940. This tank will also be fully restored.

¹³ Version of the tracked vehicle built during the war (1940-1944) in the unoccupied zone of Vichy, for forestry purposes by the National Forest Office (ONF), Eaux et forêts etc..). They were not armored for the civil use, but could be quickly converted into armored vehicles (the AMX factory clandestinely produced armoured bodies for these vehicles which were stockpiled). In 1944, some of these vehicles were used in Southern France with some Resistance / Free French groups. Information from Claude Gillono (March 2007) and AFV Weapons magazine n° 10 : The Chenillette Lorraine.

¹⁴ This tank comes from the former La Réole museum. RN T-271185.

¹⁵ This vehicle comes from a private collection located in Netherlands.

¹⁶ This vehicle comes from a private collection located in Netherlands.

¹⁷ This tank was part of the Budge collection before it has been scattered, and was then part of the Imperial War Museum collection in Duxford.

¹⁸ This tank seems to be an original Hetzer, having a petrol engine instead of a diesel one which equipped the Swiss-made G-13. It was previously part of the "Provence 44" association.

¹⁹ This tank is one of the 16 Stuart tanks recovered from Brazil by Mike Stallwood in 2008. See this Milweb article.

²⁰ The Serial Number indicates that this tank is an M4A2 built by Fisher in 1943. However, this tank has an M4A3 engine deck, and that can cause confusion. This tank was previously part of the "Provence 44" association and was used in some reenactment events.

²¹ This tank comes from the former La Réole museum.

²² This Priest comes from the Dedelstorf fire range, in Germany. It is currently being restored and was previously on display at the "Musée de l'Abri" at Hatten.

²³ This Priest comes from the Garlstedt fire range, in Germany.

²⁴ This wreck comes from a target range in Donaueschingen, Germany.

²⁵ RN 96373. Named after the tank of the RBFM, 2nd French Armored Division, in which served the well known French actor Jean Gabin.

²⁶ Comes from the "Ardennen Poteau '44" museum. This SU-100 was built in Czechoslovakia under Russian licence between 1951 and 1956.

²⁷ This SU-100 was also built in Czechoslovakia under Russian licence between 1951 and 1956.

²⁹ Named after a tank that served with the 501st Tank Regiment, 2nd French Armored Division during World War II. See Antoine Misner, M4 Sherman français.

³⁰ The 12th Artillery Regiment having been inactivated in 2009, the listed and strikeouted vehicles above have been transferred, either to the Musée de l'Artillerie, Draguignan, or Musée de l'Armée, Paris (Forum Servir et Défendre, October 2010).

³¹ Rebuilt by the ERGMEB at Gien on 13 September 1961, according to plate on the front glacis.

³² Some tanks identified by "RGW" (Forum Réserve Opérationnelle, March 2007).

³³ Named after an M4A3(105) of the 12ème Cuir, 2nd French Armored Division, destroyed in November 1944 in Strasbourg at the same place, according to Misner, M4 Sherman français. The tank currently displayed could be "Meknès", a tank from the same unit as "Cherbourg", that was knocked out at the same place, same date.

³⁴ The SN could be 49008, however the tank is confirmed as having been built by the Fisher Tank Arsenal.

³⁵ Original tank from the 501st Tank Regiment, 2nd French Armored Division, knocked out on 26 January 1945 in this village. It was restored using various parts, according to Christian Adam, "Sherman M4 Chemin des Dames" in Estevez, Shermans en France, and Misner, M4 Sherman français. Has RN 420830.

³⁶ Original M10 from 8th Chasseurs d'Afrique Regiment, 1st Free French Division, knocked out at this location on 25 January 1945, according to Adam, "M10 Porc-Epic" in Jose Manuel Estevez, Shermans en France. Has RN 439607.

³⁷ Original tank from the 1st Chasseurs d'Afrique Regiment, 5th French Armored Division, which saw action in the Battle of Vosges and was knocked out at Kientzheim on 18 December 1944, according to Misner, M4 Sherman français. Has RN 223152 painted on it.

³⁸ The pictures show the vehicles being displayed at Quartier Berniquet, Noyon (Oise), the former location of the RMT until 2010.

⁶³ A plate beside the monument indicates that this Sherman DD belonged to the 6th Canadian Armored Regiment (1st Hussars), was lost at sea on 6 June 1944, and was recovered 27 years later (in 1971).

⁶⁴ All the wrecks are located behind the museum.

⁶⁵ Markings on the front hull of the tank : "N51978; ABS N 204 S; 43310880". Sequence number 4991.

⁶⁶ This tank most probably comes from the Bourges fire range.

⁶⁷ It needs a lot of restoration. It comes from Saumur.

⁶⁸ This Churchill AVRE was lost during the landing on Juno Beach on 6 June 1944. It slipped in a crater filled with water when trying to put a faggot in it. A bridge element was placed on the roof of the tank, and gradually the crater was filled and later covered with concrete. The tank was found in November 1976 buried under the sand and recovered, at the crossing of the Arromanches road and Avenue du Général de Gaulle (100 meters far from its current location). It was then restored by the French army workshops in Caen and unveiled as a memorial on 15 October 1977. Information from Le Churchill AVRE de Graye-sur-Mer.

⁷⁰ This tank was restored in March/April 1994 by the 15 Field Workshop, 6th REME battalion, according to a plate fixed on the tank.

⁹⁷ "The turret was discovered in 1993 by Mr Van Meeven, a person interested in Atlantik Wall remains. It was upside-down, half-buried in the trench which allowed the access to the Tobruk, and covered with vegetation, so it was camouflaged for 49 years. Mr Van Meeven, helped by Möelan townhall employees and friends of the St-Marcel Breton Resistance Museum, took one day to save this old relic. After several hours, the turret was extract from its hole with a 10-ton crane. It was cleaned and put on its original Tobruk. On the back of the turret were found French 1940 Tank Battalions markings, 2 red Ace of Heart on a white square. On the left side, there is a big hole in the armour, which comes from an explosive shell fired in 1945 from an US ship during an exercise. Maquette Garden Forum.

⁹⁸ The collection was sold and the museum closed some months ago.

⁹⁹ The Horch chassis from this vehicle was recovered shortly after the war by a mechanic, in the area of Sizun in Brittany (France), where it was left by the German army in 1944. In the 1970s, this chassis was bought by the owner of the Roscoff 39-45 museum, who restored it. Original SdKfz 223 armour plates have also been discovered (engine cover and turret plates). The hull/turret were reconstructed with these plates and new steel, which makes this vehicle mostly a replica .

¹⁰¹ This turret comes from Le Fort Aguet (near Saint Brévin les Pins – Saint Nazaire). It was discovered in 1994 on a private ground and the owner gave it to the Saint Marcel museum. It was dismantled from its original Tobruk and transferred to the museum, where it was cosmetically restored. The concrete Tobruk where it currently sits is a reproduction ("Le Mur de l'Atlantique en Bretagne" book, 2002) .

¹⁰⁶ This tank was the first vehicle to enter the city of Chartres on 15 August 1944. It belonged to the 31st Tank Battalion, 7th Armored Division and was pushed into a bomb hole after having been abandoned by its crew. See the Telegraph.co.uk article about this recovery.

¹⁰⁷ Shop N° 99, Registration N° CT-163 923. This tank came from the Portuguese army. Information courtesy of Christian Dours. The original Canadian Grizzly sprockets and tracks were replaced by US M4A1 Sherman ones.

¹⁰⁸ The tank still carries additional towing lugs and original painted markings that prove that it was used by British troops during WW2.

¹⁰⁹ Information from Militaria Magazine N° 264. The tank was entirely rebuilt, only the chassis is original and comes from an M3 Lee.

¹²⁹ The M45 Maxson turret from this Half-Track has been removed, so the vehicle currently appears as a classic M3. However, the rear hull still has its M16A1 configuration (except the turret, of course).

¹³⁰ Some tank identified by Jean-François Brillant (Forum Réserve Opérationnelle, March 2007). Five of the tanks on display here were previously displayed at the ERGMEB Gien : AMX-13 T SS-11, Char B1 bis "Téméraire", Hotchkiss H39, M4A1 Sherman "Douaumont", Panhard EBR.

¹³¹ Formerly at Saumur; 1 of 3 survivors.

¹³² Five wrecks (including parts of a B1 tank) were necessary to restore this tank. It was previously nicknamed "Estienne".

¹³³ This Hotchkiss H-39 tank is the one which was previously on display at Gien, in the 12^{ème} BSMAT army base (formerly ERGMEB, Gien), along with 4 other vehicles which are now at Mourmelon. It carries a Renault R-35 turret and a fake gun.

¹³⁴ Identified by David ("La journée 'portes ouvertes' aux 501e & 503e R." MilitaryCars.net Le Forum). Named after an M4A2(75) that served with 501st Tank Regiment, 2nd French Armored Division, during World War II. See also Misner, M4 Sherman français.

¹³⁶ The 501st-503rd Tank Regiment was equipped with Panther tanks from 1947 to the mid-50s. This Panther is one of the two which were captured after the Dompaigne Battle in September 1944, brought back to Paris and on display for a long time in front of the Hôtel des Invalides in Paris, according to Jean-François Brilliant (Forum Réserve Opérationnelle, March 2007).

¹³⁷ Vehicles identified by Jean-François Brilliant (Forum Réserve Opérationnelle, November 2007).

¹³⁸ These 2 vehicles were modified to train AMX-30 crews to bail out of the tank when it was crossing a river, if the tank broke down during the crossing. Information from J-F Brilliant (Forum Servir et Défendre, July 2009).

¹³⁹ During the tank restoration, the removal of the paint allowed to find the original markings. These markings indicated that the tank's nickname was "Moghrane", a tank which belonged to the 2nd Squadron of the 12th Chasseurs d'Afrique Regiment, 2nd French Armored Division. This tank landed at Utah Beach in August 1944, participated to the fightings in Paris and at Dompaigne (September 1944), and of the Royan gap (October 1944-April 1945). The tank was retired from active duty on 18 April 1945 and stored at the GER XV, 3rd Squadron, at the Hispano-Suiza factory in Saintes (Charente-Maritime). The tank still carries an ABS plate, indicating that it underwent a mechanical revision during the 1950s.

"Bourg La Reine"¹⁵⁴ / "Georgette III"

¹⁵⁴ Stamped markings on the front glacis : "Châssis 49 475". This tank is most probably an ex-French army M4A3T. The serial number indicates that it is an M4A3, but the engine deck cover plate is similar to the ones which can be found on the M4A4Ts (re-equipped with Continental R975 engines). Moreover, the rear mudguards are typical French large post-war mudguards (which can also be found on M4A4Ts), which indicates that this tank has been transformed in the 1950s to serve in the French army. Named after the famous tank from 12th Cuirassier Regiment, 2nd French Armored Division, which was knocked out during the liberation of Phalsbourg and is preserved there. ¹⁶⁰ This tank from the 101 SS.s.Abtteilung was lost in a crater on 26 August 1944. It was blown up by a scrap dealer after the war and the small metal bits were buried when the D913 road was constructed. Bruno Renoult, a local historian, discovered and recovered parts of the turret, including the roof and parts of the left side. The hull of the tank still remain (in bits) under the road.

¹⁶¹ Tank on loan from the Engineers Museum at Avrillé. A V8 Deutz engine was fitted instead of the radial Continental engine.

¹⁷³ RN 3034142. The most important here is to retain the symbol of the Sherman tank. An M4A4 (mostly used by British and French forces during WW2, not used by the US army) was put in place there instead of an M4A1 or an M4A3 (used by US troops), which were very hard to find on the marketplace at that time. This tank was acquired from the Musée des Blindés at Saumur and entirely restored by the Lorraine Battle Memorial association in 1999, according to the President of the Lorraine Battle Memorial association.

¹⁷⁶ Information courtesy of "webmastersignal" (Le Forum de la Seconde Guerre Mondiale, April 2007).

²¹⁷ The Museum claims to have more than 800 vehicles, but this likely includes unarmored "softskin" vehicles. This list, which intend to be as complete as possible includes near 300 armored fighting vehicles.

²¹⁸ This tank comes from Bourges, where it was stored before its transfer to Saumur.

²¹⁹ Some pictures of the interior of this tank can be seen here : AMR-33

²²⁰ Fitted with a 75 mm gun and 2 SS-11 AT missiles on each side.

²²¹ This tank is a radio controlled vehicle with a 1977-dated KMT mine-plough attached. Has RN 294-0058.

²²² "Chassis N° FAMH 29," according to stamping on the front hull. The other example, formerly at Saumur, has been transferred to the 501st-503rd Tank Regiment at Mourmelon-le-Grand.

²²⁴ A plate at the museum says : "Bov III recovered from LJUBUSKI (Bosnia) by the South-East Multi-National Division , after having obtain information from the ½ paratrooper commando group of the 1st Régiment de Chasseurs Parachutistes during a mission from August to December 1996".

²²⁵ Markings stamped on the hull : ROF-L-Hull 135/190. This tank was offered by the Canadian Army on 21 March 1983. It has been repainted, but carried the name "Trun 18 août 1944" before, in memory of the Canadian soldiers who fell during the liberation of Trun in Normandy. For further information on this tank see Larkum, PTIF 3rd edition, N° 86, p. 74.

²²⁶ Fitted with a field modification to the mantlet, according to Chris Shillito, The Churchill Register.

²²⁷ A Crusader III AA turret is displayed at the Bovington Tank Museum but this vehicle is the only complete example.

²²⁸ For further information on the museum's ELC Evens see Larkum, PTIF 3rd edition, N° 138-140 and 144, p. 82.

²²⁹ In running condition since June 2009. This tank was attributed in 1940 to the Lieutenant Le Coroller, chief of the 1st Section, 3rd Company, 4th Heavy Tank Battalion. The tank fought in May 1940 at Stonne and Raucourt-et-Flaba, and then in June 1940 at Vandy and Voncq (Ardennes). It was in use in the Wehrmacht during the war, the Germans modified the radio support and the ammunition containers (information from the Saumur museum's magazine n° 54).

²³⁰ The tank was recovered with a 37mm gun, which was removed and placed on another of the museum's FT. This tank got a MG instead.

²³¹ Fitted with a German cupola and is a runner. For further information on this tank see Larkum, PTIF 3rd edition, N° 63, p. 70.

²³² This armored car was secretly built by the French resistants inside the La Rochelle gap. Information from Misner, chars FFI.

²³³ It has a shell still in the hull. This particular vehicle was re-used in 1944-45 by Free French Forces.

²³⁴ A plate carries the markings "F053110017218; CAISU 003". The correct registration number is 6894 0084, according to Anthony Pain (July 2011).

²³⁵ Markings on the hull : N° 811; ABS N 359-1950. According to the SN, this tank was built by Pressed Steel Car and originally had the RN 3015567. It is a very early Sherman, being unusual in having a riveted lower hull, which is more common on M3 Lee tanks

²³⁶ For further information on the museum's M5A1 Stuarts see Larkum, PTIF 3rd edition, N° 96, p. 75.

²³⁷ For further information on the museum's M8 HMCs see Larkum, PTIF 3rd edition, N° 52, p. 68.

²³⁹ Rebuilt by the ERGMEB at Gien on 6 March 1961 according to plate on the front glacis.

²⁴⁰ Rebuilt by the ERGMEB at Gien on 9 October 1961 according to plate on the front glacis.

²⁴¹ Rebuilt by the ERGMEB at Gien on 10 February 1961 according to plate on the front glacis.

²⁴² Boom and winch is missing.

²⁴³ The tank carries a plate on the front hull : "ARE N° 366; DATE 31.1.68." Another M47 Patton in Saumur's collection is named "Dannemarie" and carries the RN 823-922 (see "stored vehicles").

²⁴⁴ Has RN 9B3106.

²⁴⁵ This tank belonged to the 132nd Italian Armored Division "Ariete".

²⁴⁶ Vehicle recovered from Djibouti, at the bottom of a cliff. It has neither internal fittings nor engine.

²⁴⁷ This EBR was used to carry the body of Général De Gaulle during his funeral.

²⁴⁸ This tank was put out of service by the tanks of the 5th US Armored Division, on 10 August 1944, in Northern Sarthe (at a farm called "Les Noyers", in the near of Nouans), according to a plate in the museum.

²⁴⁹ This Tiger was abandoned by 102 SS.s.Abt in August 1944 and was captured by the Free French Escadron Autonome de Chars Lourds Besnier and named "Colmar." It fought during the Battle of the Saint-Nazaire gap in 1945. For further information see "History of the Tiger I at Saumur" at the Late Tiger I Interior website.

²⁵⁰ Has hull number 280112. According to an article from the Saumur museum's magazine n° 54, this tank, which now carries the turret number 233, could be the tank n° 123, which belonged to the 1st Company, 101 SS.s.Abt in August 1944. It could have been abandoned by its crew on 23 August 1944, due to some engine problems, at Brueil-en-Vexin (near Mantes-la-Jolie). It has been apparently salvaged by the French Army in September 1944, and then stored at the AMX factory at Satory before being transferred to the museum, when it was created. It was not in running condition for some months due to a gearbox problem, but the tank has been repaired recently and now, it runs normally.

²⁵¹ This tank was restored from a range target; a great part of the right-side running gear and tracks are missing. RN 91826.

²⁵² For further information on this tank see Larkum, PTIF 3rd edition, N° 60, p. 68.

²⁵³ This Renault R-39 tank was upgraded after World War II with a more recent gun, and served in the French Gendarmerie.

²⁵⁴ Formerly at the U.S. Army Ordnance Museum, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. Returned to France in 1987.

²⁵⁵ Formerly at the U.S. Army Ordnance Museum, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. Returned to France in 1987.

²⁵⁶ This tank belonged to the 132nd Italian Armored Division "Ariete".

²⁵⁷ Fitted with a German cupola. The company Creusot-Loire made up a new set of tracks to keep it in running condition, according to an article about the Saumur Museum, Militaria Magazine n° 37.

²⁶⁶ This tank comes from the ex-Eastern Germany, it was stored in Bourges before its transfer to Saumur.

²⁶⁷ A plate carries the markings "F053110017218; CAISU 003".

²⁶⁸ Named after an M4A2(75) Sherman that fought with 501st Tank Regiment, 2nd French Armored Division during WWII. See Misner, M4 Sherman français.

²⁷⁰ Seized by the French Customs at Dunkerque in 2008 and brought to the museum on 11 June 2008.

²⁷⁷ Marking on the turret : "BTM 0000B; Tourelle TS 90; N°S. 19; Date 5/81".

²⁷⁸ Marking "MSU; ORD 3/LL/2948 6; 5-6-53" painted on the sides. No turret, British fittings on the glacis. This tank is one of the 540 M4A2s built by Federal Machine and Welder, the smallest producer of Shermans (Kurt Laughlin).

²⁷⁹ The markings seem to be the original WW2 ones, this would indicate that this HMC belonged to the French Army during WW2.

²⁸⁰ This tank was possibly displayed for some years in the Bayonne citadel, during the 1960s-70s.

²⁸¹ Tank built by Ford. Very few of these tanks were sent in Europe during WW2. According to Joe DeMarco, this is the only M4A3(75) Dry stowage known in Europe, and the only one which still has its original engine deck with conventional hinges on the engine doors, and the uncut splash guard around the back of the turret. This tank is very close to its factory condition, with none of the post-WW2 modifications that the other M4A3(75) Dry built by Ford had in the USA.

It was pushed into a ravine on 11 April, because it blocked the road. To commemorate the 60th anniversary of the liberation of the town of Le Moulinet, this tank was excavated from the ravine and put on display as a monument. For more info, see Le char de Cabanes-Vieilles. The tank is still in its original paint and carries the RN 3049111.

³³⁵ The AFV carrying this name served at the 58th Artillery Regiment, according to Mehdi Madani.

³³⁶ This tank, which carries its original French WW2 nickname and markings, was built by the Chrysler Tank Arsenal in 1943 (serial number 19650). It was "put in position of Supply at the depot 31 of the Ordnance, and then assigned to the British army with the WD number T 150255 (79th Armoured div., then County of London Yeomanry). It was then transferred to the 1st Assault Brigade Royal Engineers, which participated to the Sicily landing and the Italy campaign, during which a shell damaged the left idler wheel and mudguard. Once repaired and cleared off its specific British equipments, it was put in storage in another US depot, which assigned it to the 5th French Armored Division. It ended the war at Stuttgart, Germany. This tank was repainted 3 times by the British troops and 3 times by the French ones. [...] After the war, it was modified into an M4A4T in 1951 at the ARL of Reuil". It was then used as a fire range target, before being salvaged and restored by the Group Military Conservation, located at La Seyne sur Mer (source : Militaria Magazine n° 108). The tank was put on display for some years in a ship-museum called "La Dives", but the museum closed in 2000 (Story of the ship La Dives).

³³⁷ Named after a 5^{ème} Chasseurs d'Afrique Regiment (1st French Armored Division) tank, destroyed at La Valette on 23 August 1944. See Misner, M4 Sherman français. Info courtesy of "laverdure" (Le Forum de la Seconde Guerre Mondiale, March 2007).

This tank comes from the Saumur museum, where it was displayed outside in the 80s. At that moment, it was painted with a dragon face on the front glacis. This tank is a former M4 Dozer which is missing its blade, but still carries the Dozer fittings on the glacis and suspension. (See Larkum, PTIF 3rd edition, N° 51, p. 67).

³³⁸ The incomplete chassis was recovered on 15 December 2011. The city of Sainte-Maxime wants it to be restored and preserved. It will probably be displayed somewhere in the city. This tank was lost on 15 August 1944, during the landings on La Nartelle beach. It is believed that this tank was lost by the 191st Tank Battalion, which was part of the 45th Infantry Division during the landing. As the tank chassis recovered in 2011 was identified as being an M4A4, it could be one of the Dozer tanks given by British troops in Italy to the 191st Tank Battalion for the landing, in order to clear the beach and remove mines and obstacles. A period photo shows a Sherman tank nicknamed "Night-Hawk" that was destroyed by a land mine, and it could be the tank recovered here. However, all this has to be confirmed.

³³⁹ The museum has closed in August 2008, and the fate of the vehicles is unknown.

³⁴⁰ Running condition. The tank comes from a scrap dealer located in Castres (Tarn) and was bought around year 2000. At that moment, it was equipped with a 105mm turret, but the gun and gun mount were missing. The turret has been replaced with a 76mm turret.

³⁴¹ Being restored to running condition by the current owner. This tank belonged to the French 2nd Armored Division, remains of original markings have been found before sandblasting. This tank was built in July 1943, according to Kurt Laughlin.
