Alf Adams, 2003 - <http://s698.photobucket.com/>

T17E1 Staghound Mk III – Royal Canadian Artillery Museum CFB Shilo, Manitoba (Canada)

This vehicle had a stove pipe or some such item shoved in the turret to approximate a gun barrel when displayed in the old museum. The staghound is currently- or was last year- undergoing extensive restoration in the workshops at Shilo. It is not sure whether that will include a real 75mm gun barrel however (Bruce Clark)

Pierre-Olivier Buan, August 2008 - <http://www.flickr.com/photos/13963542@N08/4430997785/in/set-72157623103988639/>

T17E1 Staghound pillbox – National War and Resistance Museum Overloon (Netherlands)

Many Dutch Staghounds ended their lives as pillboxes around military airports. For this, the Staghounds were stripped to bare hulls and the hull interior was "emptied" completely with a cutting torch. The turret gun aperture was modified by welding in a heavy casting to mount a .50 Cal. machinegun. The hull was dug in with the top deck on ground level. After that concrete was poured around the hull. Entrance was arranged by a door constructed in the rear of the hull and a underground tunnel leading to this door (Marco Hogenkamp)

<http://hmvf.co.uk/forumvb/showthread.php?31380-Staghound-Range-Target-recovered-in-Canada>

T17E1 Staghound hull – Royal Canadian Dragoons regiment, Petawawa (Canada)

The location of this Staghound hull on the impact area of the Winchester airfield was known since about 1996, and there were plans to recover it since then. The recovery was done during the winter 2011-2012, and the vehicle will probably be restored to static display condition
